Customer Reviews

These are not helpful "flashcards." (1) 30-40% are "continued" on other cards (not the back, but SEPARATE cards); unless you plan to keep in perfect order and read like a text book, you'll need to spend several hours grouping "continuation" cards and stapling them together so they do get separated (most don't even require the additional room and would have fit on one card if someone had put a minute's thought into it). (2) Roughly 40% are black letter law, while the remaining 60% are detailed Q&A (test your knowledge), without any rational division; if you want to learn the black letter law before you test your knowledge, you'll spend another couple hours separating one format from another; in fact, I could have done without the detailed Q&A cards, which were the primary source of the "continuation" problem, and just gone with a simple, clean set of around 200 black letter law cards. (3) In addition to practical use difficulties, the tone of the cards is often "Gee, where shall we go next..." or "OK, we've covered that, now what?" (4) The thickness is regular paper weight, not card stock, as you would expect in commercial flashcards. Very disappointing, of nominal use, and generally more trouble than they are worth.

Descent & Distribution exercises are incorrect as written on these flash cards.

This product goes in detail on every Wills & Trusts principles. If your professor is going to teach State specific rules, don't buy it. If your class is about general principle and your professor covers everything in detail and in depth, this is the product for you. This is NOT a helpful product for State bar exams.

This is a good resource for the law student or to prep for the bar. Covering all the usual elements of common law as well as the UTC and UPC it was a solid reference. Good mix of black letter and hypos.

I usually love Law in a Flash but these cards were mediocre at best.
