My View From Heaven: A Boy's Story Of His Journey To Heaven And The Purpose Of Life On Earth

Synopsis

Have you ever wondered what happens when we die? Where do we go? Are we greeted by our loved ones? Is there life after death? Is there a heaven? When Sarina Baptista's seven-year-old son, J.T., caught the flu and passed away in March 2007, she had many questions about Heaven. Why did he have to leave? Where is he now? Is this all there is? On a mission to find her son again, Sarina researched the afterlife from every angle. She knew her son was somewhere, but where? Six months after J.T.'s passing, Sarina discovered she was a medium. Through training and determination, she had found her son and could communicate with him! The stories he told of his experiences were beyond this world. He shared with her the secrets of Heaven and how to live a life of purpose on Earth. My View from Heaven is about a little boy's journey to the other side, how he found Heaven, why he had to leave and what he is doing now. You will never look at your life, or death, the same.

My View From Heaven; A Boy's Story of His Journey to Heaven And the Purpose

To Life On Earth by Sarina Baptista as told by J.T. Baptista tells the journey of what the author and her family went through after her son passed over. One must have an open mind due to the communications that are listed to have taken place after he crossed over to heaven. Chapter Five tells healing information on how a person can make contact with their loved ones while chapter eight delves more into the idea of describing heaven and the connection in feeling worthy. Chapter Thirteen on the purpose of life was healing to me especially because the author revealed that a person can petition heaven to learn their lessons with greater ease and grace (something I reluctantly admit to realizing I need to work on). The one area I must gently speak up about is that of Chapter Eleven. The author means well when her and her son imply that some suicides actually are taking their lives close to the time that they are meant to die and/or some cases where a family member takes their own life and others is more or less related to them acting out a plan. Even if they are right (which I do gently disagree with so I must admit my bias) this would open a dangerous door for too many people who are physically healthy to simply take their lives when they feel worthless instead of trying to overcome the obstacles to accomplish more than what they originally thought that they would be able to accomplish. For instance, a perfectly healthy person (whether in their 20s, 30s, 40s, 50s or older) may be going through tough times because they are not yet living up to their potential and allowing others to make them feel too incapable and/or stupid to accomplish any of their dreams. Writings such as what is in chapter 11 may make some of these individuals take their lives in a mistaken notion that maybe they feel worthless and/or are failing because they are not meant to be around much longer (while overlooking the fact that it may not simply yet be their time i.e. late bloomers or they simply need to pursue a different path in life). Fortunately, someone like me who knows others are judging me based on my perceived intelligence logically and intuitively understands that I'm much more capable to accomplish more than I've been allowing myself to and just need to check with my higher self/intuition and the right guidance from others to improve my course. However, other people may not yet be that fortunate to have access to such information and/or awareness and writings such as those found in chapter 11 could be really dangerous. Additionally, chapter 11 also overlooks the fact that there are too many parents who are sadly taking children with them in murder suicides that are clearly not meant to even happen. I could go on explaining more, but my spiritual heart is guiding me to stop in order to show respect towards the author and what she has went through (it is just that I felt the need to state why I respectfully disagree with the notion that the suicides of physically healthy people are meant to happen in the first place (although

I understand that others will agree with everything that is in chapter 11).

I love this book. It changed my life by lightening the burden I hold as a bereaved mother, healer, seeker. My View from Heaven juxtaposes the supernatural with doses of reality. It may sound woo-woo, but please be open-minded and this book will bring you gifts. It is wisdom from a spirit, J.T., who lived on Earth this time for only 7 years. I was invited to edit this book by his mom, Sarina, who channeled the message. I felt honored, and the student in me was curious to know what a departed soul says about the purpose of life. Since I had lost a child like Sarina, I was keenly interested in what happens in the spiritual realm when people die. This book gave more than I expected. The first time I read the manuscript a path unfolded in my head, like a new map, and J.T.'s energy came through in real time. I was in awe communing with him. His tone was friendly, enthusiastic, and definitely explanatory. I said to myself, this is how things work in heaven and on earth. Thoughts and actions have consequences. Karma is to be balanced, it is not retribution or revenge. Souls are of love, light -on Earth they play roles to contribute to each other's learning. The book implored observation, acceptance instead of judgment. That includes dealing with ourselves. Let go of how things should be. Everyone has a set of chosen lessons before we are born. That was difficult to accept, as many of us wonder, why do we experience hardships, traumas, and why do some people cause so much pain? I dueled with the idea as I worked on the book. I didn't like how some things are predetermined -even if my soul had chosen the lessons. But I looked at my life and it totally resonated with what J. T. said. I didn't want to lose a child but the horrible event changed my life for the better. It took couple of decades to see that. I got to experience others' love for me, and learned to love myself, realize my calling. J.T. talks about humans having free will. We act and play in the game of life. We do make choices and they create more paths and webs of consequences. We are here to find our purpose and live it to the fullest. We are all made of stardust. Our fellow spirits are around us, watching, learning, ready to support. Here's another place where an open-mind can help us help ourselves. The book encourages connection to guides and helpers, the Source energy. Why not? We need all the help we can get. I can go on. I appreciate My View so much that I ordered it for several beloved clients. It has been months since I read it in its entirety. As the world progresses, my old ways of thinking and dealing (i.e. judgment and apprehension) are seeping back into my consciousness. It's time to reread this book. It's a gem and will bring insight each time. And insight always brings empowerment. -Sue Wang,

This is my second book I have read from Sarina. I have lost my baby at birth 11 years ago but the grief has never left me. Then Sarina's book appeared on my iPad and my healing has started. Since then I have joined her meeting groups and had a chance to practice connecting with the other side. This book is a wonderful addition to the first one. J.T. Is an amazing story teller. He explains things that are quite hard to understand with our human mind in a very simple way. I told my 9 year old son about this book and he is eager to hear it. I told him I would read it to him when he is a bit older, but now that I have finished it , I will not wait. He will understand, I think much easier than me, as he is still so open and still so connected. I recommend this book to anyone who is interested in knowing about The Other Side and why we are here on this beautiful Earth. Thank you J.T. and thank you Sarina for this wonderful journey you both took me. Love you both. Andi B.

I found this amazing book uplifting, heartwarming, and truly inspirational. It is well written, spiritually challenging but easy to understand, and wholly believable. J.T. and his mom, Sarina, share their journey both in this life and the life after J.T. moved on through death. J.T. is truly an evolved soul with much wisdom to share. I hope that anyone who has lost a child would read this and find some consolation and reassurance in these words. It is a beautiful journey worth reading whether you've lost a loved one or not.
