Have been struggling for 2 years to feed my husband post-radiation therapy for throat cancer. The forward of this book taught me two important words before I ever got to the recipes: "Internal moisture." In order for him to be able to eat something, it has to have internal moisture. Not gravy on top of meat...not at this stage, anyway; but chicken salad in tiny shreds with mayo all through it. The book has revolutionized the way I think about cooking for him. So grateful!!

Getting healing nutrition into swallowing-impaired patients has heretofore been about bland smoothies. Judy Best has filled this book with mouth-watering alternatives, carefully chosen and marked for different swallowing levels, allergies and equipment needed. Judy's knowledge of food and ingredient mixing is apparent here and it shows; one doesn't need to be swallowing-impaired to enjoy these tasty recipes! I've passed the book or recommendations for this book along to several, especially those caring for stroke victims and the elderly who might have swallowing difficulties. Congratulations to Judy for a treasure, lovingly written and a much-needed alternative to Ensure!

A well presented, all-around good cookbook, with a nice selection of recipes, useful suggestions and product information. Recommend as a go-to addition for a special needs kitchen. I did not give it 5-stars because I like color pictures - lots of them, and this book does not have any.

The cookbook served as a lifeline to me as caregiver. The recipes are so delicious and I appreciate the stages of swallowing difficulty on each recipe as well as nutrition. Our only issue is that my husband may never get beyond a "2" - not enough recipes that he can actual handle with absolutely no saliva, but definitely gave me ideas to try....and HOPE!

Okay book.

A friend of mine is suffering from throat cancer. This book has been a great help in finding things he can swallow as he undergoes treatment.

Not really very many recipes we would be interested in.

Has some good receipts
