Customer Reviews

"Lillien's high-energy, accessible thirteenth Hungry Girl cookbook focuses on making her crowd-pleasing low-calorie, big-yield dishes with natural ingredients. As ever, the foods are designed for quick assembly and maximum convenience, exemplified by the make-ahead oatmeal bakes in many flavors and the slow-cooker chicken fajitas." — Publishers Weekly

LISA LILLIEN is a New York Times bestselling author and the creator of the Hungry Girl brand. The founder of a free daily email service, she is obsessed with food--how wonderful it is, and how much of it she can eat and still fit into her pants. More than 1 million fans eagerly wait for Hungry Girl's recipes and tips & tricks each weekday. Lillien is also the star of Hungry Girl, the top-rated cooking show airing on Food Network and Cooking Channel. She lives in Los Angeles, California.

I've been following Hungry Girl for a long time but just within the last couple of weeks, I purchased three of her books and this book I just got this week. I hesitated about making Hungry Girl recipes for a long time for some of the same reasons that others have rated some of her books poorly. But I got to a point where I just was sick of being overweight and I just don't have a lot of time to spend cooking everyday after work. So this past week I made about five of her recipes. This new book is the best book she ever came out with. Every single recipe comes with a beautiful photo. From this book, I made the Naked Eggplant Parm, the Clean & Hungry Marinara Sauce, the Shrimp & Avocado Z'paghetti, and the Pumpkin Cranberry Bars. Everything was easy to make and surprisingly delicious. I also want to comment on some of the other reviews that I read. Someone complains that "90% of the recipes are high carb". I don't understand that comment because this book is not being advertised as a low carb book. However most of the recipes are definitely lower in carbs than their high calorie, high carb counterparts. It's also a misconception to think that you have to eat low carb to lose weight. The bottom line is that it's all based on the number of calories that you consumed by the end of the day, and you need to burn off more calories than you consume. That's the bottom line. Finally, all the recipes that I chose at random were low in processed carbs. What a coincidence. The other comment had to do with packaged sweeteners. Stevia is considered to be a natural sweetener, but it's in packets everywhere. And the stevia-based Truvia is what she uses in the recipes. You are welcome to use sugar instead, but it will up the calorie count. I personally don't like the taste of artificial sweeteners but I really want to lose weight, so I got the kind that is half sugar, half stevia. When you are modifying recipes so that they will help people to lose weight, something has got to give. If you take out ALL the fat, then taste suffers. If you take out ALL the carbs, well that's not healthy for your body. You have to find a healthy compromise. And no one is going to agree 100% on what that should be. So she does give suggestions on modifications, and I made some of my own. For instance, in the Pumpkin Cranberry Bars, it calls for peanut butter. But I don't eat nuts, so I subbed sunflower butter instead. See how easy that was?

Lisa Lillian does it again! I have been an avid follower of the Hungry girl since 2008. I have lost 140 lbs. and kept it off for 5 years. Recently, a slow creep started to come back and a reboot of my eating was necessary. Enter this cookbook. These are easy to follow recipes, with clean ingredients. I am so not a cook, so the prep time is a little longer for me. The marinara sauce is amazing. The eggplant, with and without chicken is so filling, and is only 6 Smart Points if you follow WW, and the sweets section, fro-yo pops are to die for, and the yogurt grapes make a 0 point snack. The cake with the black beans is good. I think I need a 2nd time to judge really. So many great recipes, I cant wait to try them all. Now about the complaints about the artificial sweeteners in the recipes. I was diagnosed with epilepsy and form of MS 3 years ago, and forced into clean eating. I run and have eliminated all the things that may bring on seizures or symptoms. I can have pure Stevia, which sells right here. Highly concentrated all natural Stevia powder, not cut with maltodextrin, or anything else, just pure Stevia. I have been using it since my diagnosis, and I have pretty much figured out what two teaspoons (packets) measure out to, or how much sweetness I need. Dr. accepted, and will work in any of these recipes. You will not find a better, easier cookbook than this one. If you follow WW she has the SmartPoints on her website. Thanks again for helping out the noncooks and weight conscious in us all :).

She did a good job of getting rid of a lot of the processed foods she used to use. Kudos for that. I wish she wasn't using stevia, though. I find the stuff foul tasting, and that eliminated many of the recipes. Still, there are some good recipes that I can adapt for my needs.

Overall, this is a terrific book. The recipes are very easy to follow and the ingredients aren't difficult to find. The only issue I had with this book is that you are directed to use a microwave for cooking many of the recipes. This isn't an appliance we use for cooking so we view the microwave instructions as more of a guideline. We only use our microwave for heating up hand warmers in the winter and things that help with joint pain. If you don't like using a microwave to cook your food, you should still get this book - the recipes are awesome!

anything lisa writes is gold. i learned how to make tortillas and not buy them. that amazes me. i enjoy her books and have several. lisa teaches how to make basic things like ketchup with a good flavor without all the extras in a commercial brand. i try as many meals as i can. i love anything with black beans and her black bean burgers are awesome. this is a good book for easy meals and not a lot of complicationed ingredients.

Love, Love Hungry Girl and I love this book! Great recipes. Thank you for making this easy!!

This is a great cookbook! I love all the clean and few ingredient recipes. For the no calorie sweetener you don't have to use Splenda, you can use a natural sweetener like stevia, xylitol, or erithritol etc.

I just finished looking through the recipes and was very pleased that so many look interesting and use ingredients that are less processed. She has quite a few recipes that are based on lower carb swaps.
