For those that do not know, Jim Keith was a very astute, well grounded researcher that wasn't afraid to tackle issues most investigators wouldn't cover. Arguably Keith's best work was his continuous coverage of what has been called Mind Control. This is best exemplified in his book Mass Control: Engineering Human Consciousness. This book not only covers the psychological and technological control that was looked into by the powers that be going back decades, but also how the CIA is coupled to this rather disturbing scenario. Keith does an outstanding job of detailing the origins of this mechanism of social control, as well as being extremely precise in laying down the foundation of what places, such as the Tavistock Institute, were behind much of the push to implement this agenda in society. As some of you may know, the Tavistock Institute is at the forefront of Social Engineering at a vast scale, and one of the best examples of this can be seen in the book Tavistock Institute & Social Engineering The Masses by Daniel Estulin. The notable subjects that Keith begins in a wide & trenchant glance within this book, Estulin sinks his teeth into further in his own book. Needless to say, the Tavistock institute is not the only major institution that has help fuel this nefarious Social Engineering agenda. In any case, other quite notable aspects of societal control that Keith delves into include how society is being dumbing down, how ideology is often manipulated, how the subversion of sex is used, and how the erasing of the individual by molding them into a mindless robot is also being attempted. But there's more. Veterans of these disciplines will know about official mind control programs such as Project Monarch, as well as the well-known Project MK Ultra, which is "sometimes referred to as the CIA's mind control program, was the code name given to an illegal program of experiments on human subjects, designed and undertaken by the United States Central Intelligence Agency [CIA]."

[1] As the author details, not only do these programs have a streak of cult practice in them, but they also feature a extreme abuses with the use of drugs, as well as psychological abuses as individuals were made in every which way to bend to the will of the comptrollers running the programs. What's worse, is that the concealment of this abuse took place for a really long time, with many subjects unknowing of what took place due to the psychological programming that took place during the experiments. This is accomplished by erecting "pseudo-scholarly fronts to disprove that such misdeeds exist. One such group is the False Memory Syndrome Foundation, a group of psychiatrists whose mission is to prove that cult abuse and mind control are figments of the imagination."

[2] Its extremely disturbing that we live in a society that can not only carry out such experiments, but after being caught red handed continues its attempt to sweep its misdeeds under the rug. Then again, those running the show [besides still being in power] have no respect for humanity, so its par for the course really. All of the above, and much more is sifted through quite in depth by Jim Keith in this book. This alone is a great starting point for those looking into the subject of mind control, but could also buttress research already known if the reader is already quite savvy in the subject. Regardless, its a topic that affects us today, because as many investigators/researchers have detailed, its being used against people to mold our very minds. To sum up this work, it is best to leave you with this nigh century old Orwellian quote by Edward Bernays, author of Propaganda: "The conscious and intelligent manipulation of the organized habits and opinions of the masses is an important element in democratic society. Those who manipulate this unseen mechanism of society constitute an invisible government which is the true ruling power of our country. We are governed, our minds are molded, our tastes formed, our ideas suggested, largely by men we have never heard of. This is a logical result of the way in which our democratic society is organized. Vast numbers of human beings must cooperate in this manner if they are to live together as a smoothly functioning society. In almost every act of our daily lives, whether in the sphere of politics or business, in our social conduct or our ethical thinking, we are dominated by the relatively small number of persons who understand the mental processes and social patterns of the masses. It is they who pull the wires which control the public mind.

Kindest Regards,-Zy

Sources & References[1] [...] [2] Jim Keith, Mass Control Engineering Human Consciousness, p. 172.

The world that Jim Keith documents and explains is rich and sordid. Much of this book is North American history that will never grace the sheets of any common core history book. Keith sets the stage with the ideologies and financiers and moves on to the schools, clinical test subjects, politicians, psychologists and scientists that created the legs in which these campaigns could stand. This book is full of juicy information that comes together like a wonderful symphony. I believe a great companion for this book would be Mark Passio's video on Order Following, entitled: The Cult of Ultimate Evil. Look for it on youtube.

With "Mass Control" Jim Keith examines an important topic currently occurring in our culture; the mental and social transformation of the public's conception of reality. Even though "Mass Control" was first published in 1999 and reprinted again in 2003 the material is relevant to contemporary attempts by government and corporations to alter how we perceive our world. Today, more than ever the tool being used increasingly for communication and information is the internet and with it the ability to direct and control human thought, especially the youth of today who are immersed with social networking daily. As Keith reminds us the threat of mass control is enhanced because, "The internet provides the ability for almost instantaneous monitoring of the content of communications" (pg 236) therefore allowing the capability to alter the content. Keith effectively covers the characteristics of mind control through brainwashing as a technique with the intent to influence or persuade a population, either through consumer advertising for mass marketing or government control of what is released through the news media. While the content and information presented can be verified in a lot of instances through other sources there were a few chapters where the author went far afield. For instance satanic rituals and sexual abuse can be products of mind control; it seemed a bit to devote as many pages the author did to that aspect. However, Keith's coverage of how occults use mind control was pertinent to the subject. I believe reading this book is worthwhile. It opens the mind to become aware of how things we take for granted may be used to alter our perception of what is really happening with all the information we are subjected to daily. Are we being manipulated? Read this book and others like it and decide for yourself. I give "Mass Control" 4 Stars.
