Anne Weil was the author of Eleanor Roosevelt: Fighter for Social Justice, Betsy Ross: Designer of Our Flag, and Red Sails to Capri, which was a 1953 Newbery Honor Book.

We read Betsy Ross in the Fall for 2nd grade and then happened to take a trip to Philadelphia to visit family. While there, we made a history stop and took the Betsy Ross tour and spoke with "Betsy Ross" in her Quaker language. My son thought that was awesome and she made us a 5 point star! It was great to pull it together with the book and what we had learned and asking her questions along with learning more about her life/home in Philadelphia.

Great information of childhood and historical reference of her early life, would like a bit more info regarding her later life. Was perfect for 5th grade character speech!

Thanks

I bought this book gently used. I expected this book to be loved but it was loved to death. Pages ripped and a couple missing. Was not able to read the book. Lo was a but upset.

Love it. Thanks so much!

This book is a biography with large print with black and white drawings on every other page. It is simply done and covers the famous person's childhood. It showcases the traits the child possessed that helped make them famous as an adult. The entire series is written at a 4th grade level (approximately). I would prefer the entire life of a person being represented.

Great!

This is a great read for children who read at the 3rd-5th grade level. I would recommend any of Ann Weil's books.
