Crossing Paths: Reading Hands For Love And Work

Synopsis

Ever wish you could look at someone's hand and know right away if they'd make a good business partner, or for that matter, a good lover? When properly understood, the human hand is an unsurpassed tool for character and emotional analysis. Crossing Paths serves as an illustrated guide for those seeking a quick, accurate way to assess their potential partner's talents, abilities, psychology and emotional personality in both business and romance. Includes glossary and examples of public figures that exemplify specific traits.

Customer Reviews

Mahabel makes large assertions about palmistry in this little book: "The life purpose of a human being is clearly written into the hand

Vernon Mahabal is the founder and director of The Palmistry Institute in Los Angeles. In 1979 he began formal training in Vedic cosmology, resulting in numerous trips to India. He combines Western astrological palmistry with Chinese elemental hand analysis, as he continues to explore new research. Mahabal has read thousands of hands and is in constant demand as a lecturer. He has hosted his own national cable show and written numerous articles on palmistry.

Ok however too brief..

I considered it very elementary and definitely incomplete. It just barely touched on the lines in the hand. I considered it a complete waste of money.

I've been reading palmistry books for 40 years. This one is useless. Even a beginner won't find it very useful. It's not that the information is wrong, it's that there is so little of it. Like a child's primer on the subject. Don't bother.

Enjoyed

This book complements Vernon's other books. I think this book would work well for someone who is already familiar with reading hands. For this book, you would look up a keyword and on the page, it shows you what attribute that hand would have which strongly relates to the keyword. This book's style is very unique, and uncommon for a palm reading book. However, it's not really a guide book, more like a reference. I would recommend pairing this book with: The Secret Code on Your Hands: An Illustrated Guide to Palmistry, by Vernon Mahabal. In the back of this book, Vernon recommends a few different authors/books. Palm reading is an art and a science. Vernon has been reading hands for 30 years which includes several trips to India. He has his own unique style which combines Eastern, Western, Chinese, and astrology. His readings are deep, thorough, and very accurate, but his methods may not seem to coincide with 'mainstream' methods.

Whoever wrote the Publisher's Review of this book, should have at least had some knowledge in occult subject matter. Offering up snotty little remarks such as "for those inclined to believe him," and "large assertions," is disrespectful and also undermining to the author. Unless the reviewer has any sort of background in palmistry, I cannot find him credible or competent to review such topics. Perhaps this person would be better suited to writing for one of the major newspapers, where the writers cannot help themselves by soliciting personal opinion as facts. Having said this, the "large assertions" made in this book are based on 2 decades' worth of research and study. I have received personal readings from Vernon Mahabal, and find his information accurate, pertinent and scientific. "Crossing Paths," unlike Mahabal's first book, is geared towards an adult audience who wish to use palmistry as a tool to gauge character. Contrary to the profane and uninformed at Reed Business Information, the lines on the hand CAN tell you if someone is a "liar, nature-lover" or even a close-minded, prejudicial hack. In summary, "Crossing Paths" is an excellent reference material for those interested in "protecting their investments" by sussing out a potential employee, business contact,lover or any others who will enter your life.
