Customer Reviews

Mrs. Farnes is a mother and home educator and has worked in youth ministries for more than ten years. She writes youth fiction to help teens find answers to questions such as "What is self esteem and where do you get it? From other people . . . or from God?" Snow was written to encourage teens to examine these questions and their answers.

Snow is a book about an albino named Stephanie. She is legally blind and constantly teased about her appearance and eyesight. When the book starts, she is also facing the extra hardship of moving to a new town and high school. There she meets one of the first people ever to accept her just the way she is. This is a great book for people who are feeling down about their appearance or who they are as a person. I would highly recommend it.

Don't waste your money.

Great teen book - helps promote self-esteem for teens who are "differnet" :-)
